Gospel: John 20:19-31

Thomas, after the scandal of the crucifixion, was not at all disposed to believe hearsay reports of the resurrection. He had seen his own beliefs roughly disabused to put any faith now in his deceived companions. And he answered those who brought in the news, "Unless I see his hands with the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." But when Thomas was confronted by Jesus, he dared not put his fingers in the nail print nor his hand in the wound. He only said to him, "My Lord and my God." With these words, Thomas admitted his defeat and failure, and from that moment, he gave himself wholly to Christ. Up to that time, he had revered him as a man, more perfect than others, now he recognized him as his God and Lord.
