Gospel: Luke 18:9-14

The tax collector has done the one thing that God requires of those who seek access to him. He has faced the truth about himself and cast himself on God's compassion. This man has come to understand God's will and knows he lives far below his faith beliefs. This is not confessional material. The tax collector mentions no sins. He does what is essential if one is to change one's life spiritually, he expresses contrite sorrow for his immoral actions and deeds. In this simple truth, he has reopened the doors to his maker.
